

Confession

I, Aleksei Borisovich Pichko, born in 1983, residing in the village of Chervonyi Malochar, would like to tell what happened on June 14, 2014. At around half past four, I went out for a walk from my house at [REDACTED] and came to my friend [REDACTED]. We had a drink and then went out to the village. We met our friend [REDACTED] and all three of us went to the stadium. We saw that there was no one in the houses near the stadium. I decided to climb into a house and told Zub and [REDACTED] to stay out and not to follow me. I climbed into the courtyard and saw that that the house was locked. Then I climbed over into another courtyard and saw a ladder there. I took it behind the house, put it under a window, broke the window, and climbed into the house. I took some stuff there and started to climb out, but the neighbors saw me and started to shout. I ran away. I climbed over the fence and saw that Zub and [REDACTED] weren't there...
